

Course XXIII

Module Shanghai “Law and Business in China”:
19 – 23 August 2019

Reading materials

ABBREVIATIONS

PRM	PRE-READ MATERIALS: These materials have to be read in advance to follow the respective lecture
LM	LECTURE MATERIALS: You have to have these materials at hand (digitally or as hardcopies). Also, it helps to scan them, without reading them profoundly.
no specification	FURTHER MATERIALS: These materials are for students who want to dig deeper into the respective topic. Their reading is not required.

We would recommend downloading all materials on your I-Pads or other electronic devices. Of course you can also print them and take them with you to the lecture. Please note that course material will – apart from exceptional cases - not be printed by the Executive M.B.L.-HSG.

Readings and Selected Resources

Dear Candidates,

The literature on China, its culture, political system, economy, and, last but not least, its legal system has grown dramatically over the past decades as a simple Google or LexisNexis search demonstrates. In addition, books, newspapers, magazines, professional journals, and blogs provide extensive coverage of both China's impressive economic growth as well as the manifold challenges it faces.

Against this backdrop, the following reading list only provides a very small selection of short, but hopefully interesting readings for starters that might help to get a first overview while preparing for the Executive M.B.L.-HSG study module on Law & Business in China. While the emphasis is on legal literature, the suggested readings also include articles about other topics that we will cover during our study trip to Shanghai. We also include links to weblogs on law & business in China that cover most recent developments. We recommend browsing these sites, too.

In addition you will find some pre-reading materials selected by the lecturers of the week.
